ICELANDIC WOMEN. A Visit to Some Humble tadles of That Frigid Clime. Manners are simple in Iceland, as iudeed in all the Scandinavian countries; an I all the simpler here because there is really no distinction of rank. There is no title of respect, save Herra to the bishop and Sira to a priest; not even such a title as Mr. or Mrs., or esquire. If you go to call for a lady you tap at Good Prospects for the Cereals-Bad for the door and ask if Ingibjorg or Valgeror is in; or, if you wish to give her full name, Ingibjorg Thomaldsdottir, or Eiriksdottir, or Bjark, ottir (as the Isdottir, or case may be), for there is no title of and fall into a pretty bewilderment concerning the whereabouts of penknife and glove-buttoner and tablets.
